MAHA Ireland upgrades training facility at Rathcoole HQ

- MAHA Ireland is pleased to unveil its revamped training facility at its headquarters in Rathcoole.

Rathcoole, 3rd August 2026. The purpose-built space ensures engineers stay compliant with the latest legislation and refine their skills. It also serves as a showcase for MAHA's premium workshop equipment.

Fitted out with new equipment, including brake, suspension, emissions and headlight testers, the training room is designed to provide engineers with hands-on experience, to sharpen their skills and boost their confidence. This is particularly important when new equipment is launched into the market.

The concept also reflects MAHA desire to demonstrate the functions, quality and innovation of its workshop equipment to its customers – whether potential and or long-standing partners.

Furthermore, before the renovation, MAHA welcomed students from a nearby school in Germany. These pupils were in Ireland as part of their Professional Development Programme, and during their tour they visited the training room to familiarise themselves with the equipment and services MAHA offers.

MAHA Ireland Managing Director, Eoin Mallon, said: "The revamped space not only supports continuous professional development but also offers a platform for our engineers and customers to engage with the latest advancements in automotive technology."

"The new EUSAMA PhaseShift suspension tester and particle emission tester, both of which were recently installed at our premises in Dublin, are also planned for on-site trials with customers later this year. Our training facility serves as a testing ground to configure new products before they reach the workshops."
